FROM THE OFFICE OF THE DEAN

Happy Holidays TMSL Family:

As we enter the holiday season, I'd like to take a moment to share my sincere appreciation for your past commitment and generosity to the Law School. We begin the holiday season with very good news. First, the July 2013 Texas Bar Exam results for the Law School were the best in the school's history. Second, the Law School recently received notice that the goal, the achievement of which many of you worked with us to accomplish, became reality – the Law School will be admitted to membership in the Association of American Law Schools in January 2014.

The Association of American Law Schools (AALS) is a non-profit educational association of approximately 180 law schools that serves as a crucial national voice to represent the best interest of legal education. Membership signifies that a law school reflects the Association's core values and has met the rigorous requirements specified in the AALS Bylaws and Executive Committee Regulations. The purpose of the AALS is "the improvement of the legal profession through legal education." This goal is accomplished in a number of ways, including professional development programs for law professors and administrators, a complement of over 90 sections organized by faculty. Membership in the AALS enhances our faculty's opportunity to play national leadership roles in the academy. It also qualifies the law school to provide further recognition for our students by applying for membership in the Order of the Coif.

While we are proud of these achievements by our students and institution, we are focused on sustaining and enhancing this upward arc. We are required to do so during this next year because Thurgood Marshall School of Law is currently working to revamp its 2010 Strategic Plan and to prepare a Self-Study for the upcoming site visit of the American Bar Association in 2014. This site visit for fully-approved law schools, which takes place every seventh year, is organized by the ABA Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar, and is required by the ABA Standards for Approval of Law Schools.

Our Strategic Plan will include a vision statement, overarching goals, and measures of accountability. The Self-Study will state the goals that the law school has set for itself, identify and analyze the areas of the school's strengths and weaknesses in light of those goals, and relate the present and prospective resources to the stated objectives. This process is a collective enterprise that includes key stakeholders such as faculty, students, alumni, staff, and members of our legal community.

We are now in the process of reviewing our current plan and generating specific data and feedback from law school administrative departments, faculty, and students, but the experience and wisdom of prominent members of the bar, judiciary, and alumni are an integral and crucial part of this process.

The Strategic Plan and the Self Study will be finalized towards the end of the spring semester, after meetings with stakeholder groups, surveys of faculty and staff, a faculty retreat, and the review of all the data and information prepared by Law School committees.

We appreciate your continued support and commitment to the University and Thurgood Marshall School of Law, and furthermore, wish you and your family a happy holiday!

Sincerely,

Dannys Hollay

Professor Emeka Duruigbo was invited to submit an article to the North Carolina Central University Law Review in addition to his presentation at the R.J. Reynolds Symposium at NCCU School of Law in April 2012. The article was recently published as: Emeka Duruigbo, Community Equity Participation in African Petroleum Ventures: Path to Economic Growth?, 35 N.C. CENT. L. REV. 111 (2013). The article examines the flurry of activities following new oil and gas discoveries that has led to what some commentators refer to as the “Second Scramble for Africa.” While this development may be good for business interests and political leaders, it is not very clear that the average citizen in the countries hosting the petroleum operations will come out ahead. To address the issue of how to ensure that Africans benefit maximally, equitably and sustainably from the continent's natural resource riches, the article argues for the introduction of a system of community equity participation in oil and gas ventures. The article extensively examines the benefits of community equity participation, including the generation of personal and social capital, facilitation of corporate social license, and entrenchment of a closer and accountable form of governance.

On January 14, 2014, at 12:00 p.m. in the Dean’s Conference Room, TMSL will host the TSU College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences to discuss, Professional School and the Enhancement of Student Learning, facilitated by Professor Okezie Chukumerije. This discussion is the second of a two-part intellectual exchange with the TSU College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences. The first occurred in Fall 2013 and centered on professionalism in law and in pharmacy. All law and pharmacy faculty are encouraged to attend.

On January 21, 2014, at 12:00 p.m. in the Dean’s Conference Room, Professor Thelma Harmon will deliver her talk to the faculty, The Ball and Chain: The Burdensome Restraint on the Supreme Court’s Bright Line Rule in Vance v. Ball State University, as part of the TMSL Quodlibet. All faculty are encouraged to attend.

FROM THE OFFICE OF SBA PRESIDENT GAVEN NORRIS

The 1L Class of 2016 held the annual 1L Battle of the Sections for criminal law. Professor April Walker conducted this year's Battle of the Sections. Over the past decade all four sections of the 1L class come together and compete in a jeopardy style competition where they are asked criminal law questions. There are four teams of four which represent each section of the 1L class. This friendly competition styled review is held only a few weeks before the 1L's fall criminal law comprehensive examination. The winning section receives bragging rights and an additional prize determined by the 1L class board.

In a show of homage to their criminal law professor, Professor April Walker, section 3 wore section t-shirts which read "Keep Calm & Walker On".

Section 4 won the Battle of the Sections by waging all of their points on the very last question where they were given a hypo and were asked to give the legal answer under the common law and model penal code. Congratulation to Section 4 and best wishes to the entire Class of 2016 on their pending criminal law comprehensive exam.

On Friday November 8, 2013, the TMSL Student Bar Association held a special event honoring the veterans attending TMSL. Currently, there are 65 students and staff attending, or employed at, Thurgood Marshall who have either previously served in the United States military or are currently serving in the United States military.

The SBA Executive Board found it imperative that they make an affirmative statement showing their support of and care for our service men and women. Because TMSL was to be closed in observance of the Veterans Day holiday, the SBA purchased military flags which represent each branch of the U. S. military, and which will be permanently displayed at TMSL, and the SBA held a “Thank You” breakfast for the TMSL veterans.

The following is a brief statement on behalf of the SBA regarding honoring our veterans.

“Each year, hundreds of thousands of men and women leave their families and deploy to far flung countries around the globe. They will watch their children grow up via Skype, miss family holidays, and sometimes, the death of loved ones. They are fathers and mothers, husbands and wives, sons and daughters, and brothers and sisters. But first and foremost, they are soldiers.

We celebrate Veterans Day to remember those who paid the ultimate price for freedom. We comfort the soldiers who came back with broken bodies and broken minds. We thank the men and women who have served and are currently serving this country, no matter their role. While as citizens we may not always agree if war is fair or right, The Student Bar Association believes we can all agree that those who heed the call to serve this country deserve our thanks.”

ALUMNI NEWS

TMSL Alums Secure Dismissal for CultureMap, LLC and Reporter Claire St. Amant from SLAPP Suit

TMSL alum and Greenberg Traurig trial lawyer Victor D. Vital, with TMSL alum and associate Christopher L. Harbin providing critical assistance, secured a dismissal of defamation allegations against online media company, CultureMap, LLC, and its Dallas managing editor, Claire St. Amant. The Greenberg Traurig team used the Texas's Citizen Participation Act to obtain the dismissal. The Citizen's Participation Act provides for the expedited dismissal of meritless "strategic lawsuits against public participation" ("SLAPP suits") aimed at limiting certain valuable rights like the constitutional right to free speech.

The lawsuit, filed by Dr. Richard and Leanne Malouf, alleged that CultureMap, LLC and Claire St. Amant were liable for defamation arising from their reporting of the Maloufs' lawsuit against prominent media entities and personalities. Dr. Malouf was a partial owner of All Smiles Dental Care and has been accused of Medicaid fraud in connection with his practice. Other respected media companies, such as AOL and WFAA, are named as co-defendants in the suit arising from their news coverage and news-gathering activities focused on the Maloufs.

"I was glad to defend CultureMap, LLC and Claire St. Amant and to protect their constitutional rights to free speech and press," said Vital. "We are pleased to have played a part in making sure the citizens of Dallas have access to information, freely distributed by the press."

The ECI Journal is published in an online format annually each November. The online format enables efficient use for potential authors, peer-reviewers and editors. This format also increases accessibility for readers and researchers. In fact, the journal was downloaded 3,596 times in the past year.

The Journal publishes papers primarily on issues that impact legal and social policy in the urban community. In the article selection process the Journal focuses primarily on the Institute's priority areas, which for the next five years are housing, education, family and criminal justice. The journal is peer reviewed and seeks to make available research and knowledge in the areas of legal and social policy to equip and empower educators and others nationwide with research driven articles that will contribute to their ability to meet the diverse needs of urban populations. Based on a survey of journals there is an absence of interdisciplinary journals that focus solely on legal and social policy issues that impact urban and minority communities in these issue areas. The ECI Journal for Legal & Social Policy seeks to fill that void. The Institute is seeking multi-disciplinary writers, editors and peer reviewers. To submit an article for consideration go to http://ecipublications.org/submit\_research.html.
