

Shlomo Pill

Shlomo Pill serves as an Assistant Professor of Law at the Thurgood Marshall School of Law (TMSL), where he teaches Torts, Religion and the Law, and Conflicts of Law. His research centers on the intersections of religion and law, utilizing comparative approaches to the study of religious legal traditions—especially Jewish and Islamic jurisprudence—to reconsider perennial questions in American law. Prior to joining the faculty at TMSL, Dr. Pill worked as a Visiting Assistant Professor at Emory Law School and as the Paul and Marion Kuntz Scholar in Law and Religion at Emory's Center for the Study of Law and Religion. In addition to his teaching and scholarship, Dr. Pill directed the Study on Law and Ministry in the United States, a multi-year initiative funded by the Lilly Endowment that is mapping the ways that Christian clergy and religious organizations interact with state and federal laws, and served as the founding editor of Canopy Forum, an online publication for public scholarship and discussion on law and religion issues. In addition to his academic work, Dr. Pill is an ordained rabbi and is a frequent lecturer to academic and popular audiences on issues of law, religion, and interfaith engagement. He is the author of more than two-dozen academic articles that have appeared in the William and Mary Bill of Rights Journal, Buffalo Law Review, Mississippi Law Journal, Regent Law Review, the Harvard Journal of Racial and Ethnic Justice, and other publications.

